

I deplore Sinclair's decision to run "Stolen Honor" and force all of its affiliates to air it. It is a blatantly one-sided, political program. The "Equal Time" provision of the FCC expressly forbids this, and you must apply your power to prevent this from happening. Otherwise, Sen. Kerry must receive equal prime time on all the exact same stations for rebuttal or to air a blatantly one-sided, political program of his own.

Fair is fair. This is not. If the FCC refuses to exercise its power to prevent this from happening, then the FCC has lost any pretense of controlling fairness on our public airways.

Jay Leno and David Letterman cannot, during this time, invite one candidate to their programs without inviting the other. Why should Sinclair use of the public airways be any different?
